THE CHORUS GIRL—By Roy L. McCardell.

"You dassen't say a word to a dressmaker or she'll hold you up; and she's there with the goods. The only way to get square is to pay part and promise to send the balance."

"Do you see that young fellow?" said Masterson. "Well, he makes fifteen or twenty dollars a day playing the races and loses it all selling papers."

"He's happy in spite of the heat, and can play 'Waiting at the Church' with variations with his back to the piano."

"That's all the society news I know. As soon as I can get my new dresses from Madame Flanagan I'm going to beat it in the direction of the beaches and sun-tanned, liberal hands."

"Abie Wogglebaum and Louie Zinsheimer want us to go to some place not too far from town, as this is the busy season for them."

"That's all I know, except some hot-weather anecdotes of Broadway. Want to hear them? They must be true, because Charley Face, the dashing young romantic actor, who's rooming at our house, told them to me."

"Charley Face says that the other day Pat Masterson and Parson Davies were passing in front of the Metropole when they saw a young fellow selling Thaw murder extras like hot cakes."

consults him on all important matters, when the truth is Erlanger has no use for him, and everybody knows it but the near-manager.

"There isn't anything I wouldn't do for Abe Erlanger," said the near-manager. "If he was to ask me to go out in the street there and lay in front of a trolley car I'd do it!"

"I'm glad you have so much regard for him," said Lackaye, "and I know he's going to ask you to do it before long!"

"Another one of Charley Face's stories is about Willie Collier. He is making a hit in 'The Jockey' in Australia, and so is too far away to deny it."

"He says that Willie Collier was entertaining a party of friends at Rector's just before he sailed and a tight-wad Englishman butted in and monopolized everything about the dinner except the paying for it."

"When Collier paid the check out of a $50-bill the waiter brought back the change on a tray. It was a whole lot of silver, 50-cent pieces, quarters and dimes."

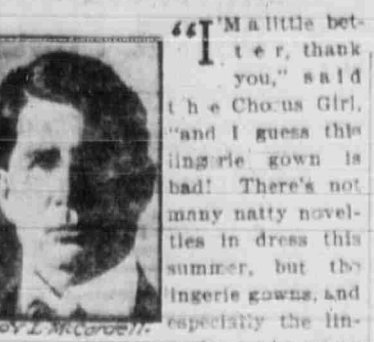

"Collier pushed the tray over to the waiter and the tight-wad Englishman threw a fit. 'I say, old chap, you ain't going to give all that to the waiter? What?' said the tight wad."

"Certainly not, if you object," said Collier, pushing the plate toward him. "Take some of it yourself!"

"Can't I hand you a laugh at all? Well, don't blame it on me. It's the weather. You don't expect me to come down Broadway and do a comedy acrobatic act simply for your kind applause."

"No? Well, Oscar Hammerstein says that no monologist can make good in a summer show. That's why he has Rector and Prevost on for a long run at the roof, and the other night when a man laughed at them they thought they were being gaped and made him ring down the bell."

"Do you think a lady should apologize for powdering her nose in weather like this, or should she do it with silent unostentation?"

"I'm a little better, thank you," said the Chorus Girl, "and I guess this lingerie gown is bad! There's not many natty novelties in dress this summer, but the lingerie gowns, and especially the lingerie princess gowns, make up for what's missing."

"You mustn't wear anything but white in a lingerie gown, because you can't get any in color, and it's called that because it's all white and lacy."

"My dressmaker's got that tied feeling, but she's a lovely promiser, and tells me over the telephone that my new summer suits will be ready in a few days—she tells me that every few days. But you dassen't say a word to a dressmaker or she'll hold you up; and she's there with the goods—the dress goods—if ever anybody was."

"The only way to get square is to pay part and promise to send the balance of your bill. But I'd be ashamed to keep 'em waiting as long for the money as they keep you waiting for your costumes."

"Colors is in, of course, and if you are wearing Alice hige or old rose in your summer outfits you want everything to match—pumps, stockings, hat, necktie and gloves. There's what's called 'symphony suits'."

"For the simple life and hard-ham-mock wear you can put on men's negligee shirts made for ladies, with a dinky little pocket in the upper left hand corner and a turn-down collar to match."

"Gloves comes in silk or hie thread, elbow length, in white or black, unless you are in a symphony outfit—and I think they look tacky."

"But what's a girl to do? It's nothing but long gloves this summer, and you'd smother in suede."

BETTY VINCENT'S ADVICE TO LOVERS

THE RARE CHARM OF PERSONALITY.

PERSONALITY is a great and remarkable thing, as we all know. To-day I was asked if I thought it could be cultivated.

I think it can.

Most of us have more or less of this personality, and it is good, bad or indifferent as we make it. A person with a disagreeable personality can improve it certainly. It may be going against the grain if he inherits it, but it can be done.

The most agreeable personalities are born to one—not cultivated. They are the delightful, spontaneous, amusing people that we love to be with. They are not always the most thoughtful by any means—nor do they weigh consequences as a rule. But they are charming and restful.

This, you will say, is disposition. No, it isn't. People with the best dispositions in the world may be entirely without this fascinating attribute.

The beginning of cultivating a personality is to make yourself interesting whatever happens. Don't let yourself get into a rut and make up your mind that the easiest thing to do is to stay there. It is, I admit, but when it becomes tiresome after a few years, who is going to help you out or care whether you get out or not, unless you are interesting and have a personality? You will find that everybody will be too busy. Kind words will be all they will have for you and sympathy, which I think, applied personally, is a good deal like the charity that supplies little red fannel petticoats for the Fiji Islanders.

months. How can I find out if she loves me?

LOVER.

Ask her. Perhaps she was trying to make you jealous.

Is Fat and Independent.

Dear Betty:

I KNOW the prettiest country maiden in the State of New Jersey and I have towards her the best intentions in the world. She is quite fat and therefore very independent and "easy," and treats me badly. What can I do to make her jealous?

SUITOR.

Tell her about your other girls, and how nice and thin they are. Don't give her any more presents.

She Is Lonely.

Dear Betty:

I AM a young girl twenty-three years old (look younger), and would like your advice as to how I can make the acquaintance of some nice young men. I have a large circle of girl friends, but they never introduce me to any gentlemen. A LONELY GIRL.

Can't you get some of the older women that you know to introduce you to some nice men? You only need to meet a few. The fewer the better for a girl in your position, I should think.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Cure for Blackheads.

AUGUSTA—The following lotion may be used as a cure for acne, or blackheads, dipping a soft rag into the preparation and rubbing it firmly over the face light and morning: powdered sulphur, dram; alcohol, 1 ounce. Mix. This mixture must be shaken before use.

While employing the lotion an occasional dose of flowers of sulphur should be taken in warm milk before breakfast. The face must be washed night and morning before using the lotion in very hot water.

Eyebrows That Meet.

CHARLIE—Get a pair of tweezers and pull out the hair between the brows. They will grow again, but you can repeat the operation. You can have them permanently removed by an electric needle. Go to a competent operator.

Blood Rushes to the Head.

M.—You should see your doctor at once about the rushing of blood to your head. Don't think of doing it on go.

To Have Hair Dyed.

M.—Yes, you can have hair dyed at any hairdresser's. It is much more satisfactory than a personal attempt at applying a home-made dye.

TORTURES THAT WOMEN ENDURE IN BEAUTY'S NAME.

FROM the days of Cleopatra the most fragile women have endured the fiercest tortures and the direst discomforts in order to appear more beautiful than nature really intended them. Poppaea, Nero's wife, bathed daily in the milk of a hundred goats and wore all sorts of hideous and unpleasant facial appliances to twist her features and complexion into added loveliness. Phryne, Ninon de l'Enclos and other old-time beauties submitted to the same sort of agonies, and, in later days, few women can be found who are free to a greater or less extent, from the same sacrifice. Woman has a monopoly in this. Man does not rival her.

What more man, for instance, would wind his hair about with tight curlers, till each strand was pulled half out of his head, and would sleep thus all night, with the added unpleasantness of grease smeared all over his face and tight gloves on his hands? Or what normal man would squeeze his waist to the point of anguish to confine it in a torturing corset or jam No. 5 feet into No. 3 shoes with murderous heels?

The cult of "beauty torture," as seen in the accompanying photographs from the London Sketch, is revived in all its terrors by the up-to-date woman.

The first illustration shows a girl who has bound a sort of tight cloth gag across her lower face to press into shape a prominent upper lip. The second shows the same sort of bandage a little higher up to alter the form of recalcitrant nostrils.

The third is not a football player, although the nasal appliance she wears is not unlike in appearance those donned by gridiron warriors. She has a badly formed nose, and the thing she wears over it is supposed to correct the shape and turn it Grecian or renaissance, according to choice. The fourth sufferer has a tendency to flabby and pendulous cheeks. The braces on either side of her face hold up the cheeks and impart to them the needed consistency and firmness. These are but a few of the countless up-to-date tortures "in beauty's name."

BOOKMAKER'S SHIRTWAIST.

By Nixola Greeley-Smith.

It is improper for a bookmaker to take off his coat, and if so, why?

The Evening World's racing expert asks this question as the result of an order that bookmakers must put on their coats before rushing out on the lawn to see the races.

"A man's shirt is far more decent than many women's shirtwaists," he justly remarks. "If women may appear in gowns, why not the men?"

Only because propriety is merely a state of mind, not a fact. We have grown mentally accustomed to the shirt-waist woman. Therefore she is proper. Our eyes are still unaccustomed to the shirtwaist man. Therefore he is not.

Also, by some strange fatality, a man looks warmer with his coat off than with it on. In the abstract, the shirtwaist man seems just and right and reasonable. In the concrete, he is impossible.

Chicago is his happy hunting ground. One very warm day last summer, when I was in the Windy City just long enough to reflect that it was a long time between rain, I saw hundreds of them blue, pink, violet shirted, and trailing their suspenders as he came. Never before had I received such an impression of helpless, hopeless test, save perhaps in looking on a warm day in an art gallery at one of those fat Madonnas of Rubens or Van Dyck that fairly make the canvas perspire.

But though the shirtwaist man has no place on Broadway, where men and women have equal thoroughfare, it seems to me a man whose business is with the race track pre-eminently a masculine domain, has a right to make himself as comfortable as other men do in pursuing other businesses.

Women employed in downtown offices do not expect men to wear their coats in summer in deference to their presence. For they know they have invaded what is still by right of majority a masculine field, and they bend their notions of propriety to meet it.

Race tracks are run for men by men. And to subordinate their comfort to the squeamish notions of the comparatively few women who attend them and pike along on fifty-cent and dollar bets doubled up (the sporting editor has just supplied the technique) seems extremely unfair.

Besides, the majority of women who make a business of attending race tracks are not squeamish. The boarding-house keeper with her week's tribute takes the colored cook with her week's wages, and very often the cook supplies the money to get home. I once had a race-loving landlady who had a row with her cook because, having borrowed the latter's best shoes to wear to the track some time before, she refused her an afternoon off so she wouldn't have a chance to replenish them.

Certainly, the bookmaker is entitled to his shirtwaist. If race-track propriety progresses at this rate, the next thing we know the horses will be required to run with blankets on.

May Manton's Daily Fashions

SUCH tiny little coats as these are made of almost every possible material and treated in every attractive way to be worn for a variety of occasions. Made from all-over lace or from embroidered linen combined with lace insertion edged as illustrated, the plain one becomes as dainty a garment as possible, while made entirely from linen or silk with trimming of banding, it becomes comparatively plain and simple.

The scalloped bolero is slightly different in shape, perhaps a bit more jaunty, and allows of equal variation. In this instance linen is trimmed with lace applique and is finished at the edges with banding, but all-over lace and embroidery, and indeed, every material of the sort can be utilized. Or, again, as in the case of the plain bolero, a similar effect can be obtained by using plain material and trimming the edges with one of the many beautiful beads or braidings for the season.

The quantity of material required for the plain bolero is 2-3/4 yards 18 or 21, 3 yards 24 or 26, 4 yards 30 or 36, 5 yards 36 or 42, 6 yards 42 or 48, 7 yards 48 or 54, 8 yards 54 or 60, 9 yards 60
